fered. See advertisement.

THE BUSINESS OF RALEIGH.

The Monetary Condition of This

Section—The Cotton Crop, its

Present and Probable Prices and its Bearing Upon the Trade of the City—The Condition of the

Farming, Public,

All Lines of

Trade Considered.

With a view of acquainting our readers, and particularly those interested in the business of Raleigh, with the probable prospects of the general business of the city this fall and the condition and results of the crops contiguous to the trade of Raleigh, we have taken the pains to interview a number of our leading merchants and business men in the different lines of trade, and the following statements obtained from the gentlemen may be relied upon as indicating the trade of Raleigh for the fall and winter seasons, judging the crops and the general business prospects from every possible standpoint.

MONETARY.

The general money market of this section has been much depressed during the last six months, it having been almost impossible to obtain accommodation upon any class of paper, the banks generally declining to loan since the passage of the usury law, and this fact has materially affected business during the summer season.

Upon inquiry at the various banks, however, we find them all, having hastened their resources for a springly fall trade, are now prepared to accommodate the legitimate trade of the city. This fact, however, will not materially affect the general trade of Raleigh this fall, one way or the other, as the cotton sold in this market is bought almost exclusively on orders, and hence the money which thus finds circulation is obtained to a great extent outside of our banking facilities. And hence it may be reasonably supposed that as soon as the cotton season shall have been fairly opened our money market will be much easier.

THE COTTON MARKET AND THE

GENERAL COMMISSION AND GROC-

ERY BUSINESS.

Messrs. Williamson, Upchurch and Thomas say the present trade in cotton is light, the new crop being later coming in than last season. The present low price of cotton does not disappoint them, and they think the farmer generally has based his calculation upon 12 cents and will be willing to sell at that price, the crops having been made at much less expense than former years if not in any year since the war, this resulting in a great extent from the fact that the crops have been prevented, from various causes, from obtaining that amount of assistance to which he has been accustomed. The general scarcity of money, however, will cause the crop to be sold to a great extent without delay. The quantity of cotton grown will not be more, if as much as last year upon the same acreage, doubtless a falling off, but the general receipts in the city will
